Art psychotherapy is regarded as a body and mind intervention in this thesis and as such, the whole body is in focus with its different parts. The body is looked upon as an entity. The understanding of the art psychotherapy is something of this kind; art facilitates bodily processes. The body expresses figures and forms on to the paper and after that, it views an impression of the painted with its eyes.

“For some complex reason, the body-and-mind will not comprehend its innate affects; this means that when the body-and-mind experiences tensions they ward them off continuously. The tension in the body-and-mind will have no outlet; a terrible situation for the unrecognised feelings as they need to be treated. Gradually, the feelings can be converted into somatic or mental disorders. A primary form of alexithymia will be developed; it is regarded as a permanent state. Alexithymia in the secondary form is regarded as natural reaction; it is a phase in the process of crisis.
